CHAPTER 5: WEB RESOURCES

Personality Type

Dr. John W. Gittinger formulated the Personality Assessment System (PAS). Explore Dr. David Saunders' related ideas at The Personality Assessment System Foundation.

www.pasf.org

KnowYourType offers the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator® Instrument, a personality tool that provides insight into how and why people understand and approach the world in such different ways.

www.knowyourtype.com

PersonalityPathways explores personality type and its applications. The Web site provides information on the Myers-Briggs Personality Type and the research of Dr. David Saunders.

www.personalitypathways.com

Learning Styles

Search Wikipedia for information on learning styles. A search on "learning styles" will bring you to the main page, which contains lots of updated information. From there, click on links that interest you to explore more information on models and theories of learning styles.

http://en.wikipedia.org

Learn-a-tivity is the notion that individual and organizational effectiveness depend on learning better, faster, and smarter, and through the consistent application of learning, combined with creativity, flexibility, and paying close attention to the right things. This site introduces you to resources that support learnativity.

www.learnativity.com

The Ageless Learner focuses on how learning and curiosity influence everything you do in life, no matter your age, education, or occupation. This Web site provides resources and information to help you get more from life whether you're "four or ninety-four."

http://agelesslearner.com

Learning styles are a way to help improve your quality of learning. By understanding your own personal styles, you can adapt the learning process and techniques you use. This site is dedicated to helping you better understand learning styles, as well as providing an easy way to discover your own styles.

www.learning-styles-online.com